WORKING WITH PERSONALITY DISORDERS

A ONE DAY COURSE

The programme looks at the difficulties faced by this often misunderstood and sometimes challenging client group from both the service user and mental health workers' perspectives. It aims to provide introductory overview of best practice when working with people who have personality disorders.

The course identifies appropriate interventions and strategies which may promote wellbeing and ensure that the worker becomes part of the solution and not part of the problem. It also aspires to break some of the misconceptions which often are associated with people with this diagnosis. The course draws on the latest research and key initiatives from the Department of Health.

WHO IS THIS COURSE FOR?

The course is designed for any one who works directly with people with personality difficulties whether qualified or unqualified or working in the voluntary or statutory sectors. This may include mental health staff such as support workers, ward staff, student nurses, O.T.s, community mental health workers.
